President's Report

President - Ann Vincent

I thought I should brag about our own Chatsworth Library having the largest signups for the Adult Reading Program that was sponsored by the Los Angeles Public Library. This was a new addition this year to the Summer Reading Program to include all age groups. I learned a little more this summer by signing up... it's amazing what happens when you are challenged!

Watch for the Valley Book Cycle in the upcoming Chatsworth Parade. Our Friends of the Library along with other Friends Groups purchased a Book Cycle to promote Library Programs at schools and community events.

Friends Book Room

If you have not stepped into our Friends book room lately, you are in for a delightful surprise. Jeanie Heine comes up with all the decoration ideas and enjoys creatively celebrating each month with a new décor. She includes a decorated candy cake for the book room volunteers to enjoy. We are delighted to have her share her talents with us.

Our book room is our central Friends of the Library office and hangout for our volunteers. If you are interested in volunteering to help with book sales, your help is appreciated.

Halloween Candy Cake

Library Landscape

Join us on Wednesdays at 4:30 during the summer as we continue to pick up trash, water and weed to keep our library beautiful.

Library Bears

It started out with the Wells Fargo Horse for our Chatsworth Branch, but soon furry friends were donated or loaned to our branch. Decoration and seasonal clothing is the brainchild of Jelena Csanyi who is responsible for the display you see today.

If you see her dressing her bears, be sure to let her know that you appreciate her efforts. That's what keeps her going... a positive word from a total stranger who enjoys and appreciates her passion.

A change of Bear Wear for October!

Summer Memories

By Donna Boswell

I signed up for the summer reading library program for adults, with fond memories of participating as a child earning beads, stickers and the thrill of seeking out new books. The program at the Chatsworth library had several tasks that had me stretching in my regular repertoire of audio cd's, book club nominees, and my general reading. The hardest task for me was to read a memoir. I never enjoyed reading memoirs in the past having trouble finding the "voice" within the pages over my own. Nevertheless, I read two memoirs this summer, and listened to one on audio cd. The only reason why it was three, one was a required reading for a book club that meets on weekends, one was a past book club that I am catching up on, and one was an impulse pickup when I joined the summer reading program.

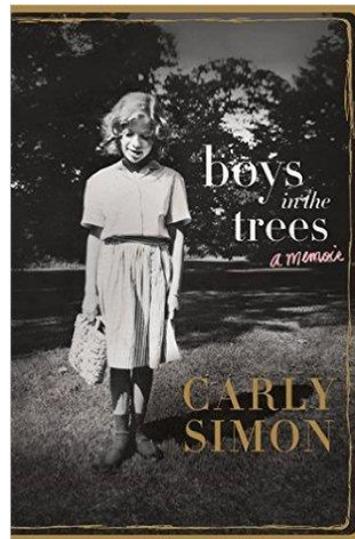

So the impulse pickup I shall not speak of, I did not like it and did not consider it a memoir, as it had little of the writer's memories and more of their political viewpoint. I could not relate to it at all, especially after having to go to the dictionary to look up words one too many times in the first chapter alone.

The second book was called Into the Magic Shop, by Dr. James Doty. It was picked by my Saturday book club; it was about a boy who grew up in Lancaster, CA and his life before and after as he became a neurosurgeon. The book discussed how he managed to learn to quiet the voices in his head that give doubts and visualize success; a tough task for a child in a not-so-good part of town. His childhood experiences in the magic shop shaped his future and the impact he had on others as he travelled through his career. Don't want to give too much of this one away, but it was interesting to read.

The last book came as a recommendation from another book club, and our head librarian, Jan mentioned that it was available on audio cd. Since my daily commute for work can be up to three hours, you can see why lately I prefer books on cd. It was called Boys in the Trees by Carly Simon. I have always liked her music, and thought it would be interesting to listen to this memoir, especially since she read the book herself.

In addition to listening to her talk about her youth (the book covers age 5 or so up to her divorce from James Taylor) she played acoustical guitar at little interludes in the book, which was also a great opportunity to hear her musical "voice" as well. I enjoyed hearing about her career and how she wrote songs based on her experiences. I learned many things of her and her family's background that I did not know, as well as hearing about touring in Europe and the West Coast. Of the three, this was my favorite.

I would not consider myself an aficionado of memoirs, however I have learned that if I talk to others about whether they liked it or not, as well as read a few reviews, I might venture out for more.
